

Committee of Convention 108

Stefano Rodotà Data Protection Award 2019

Competition rules

Article 1 – Purpose of the competition

The Committee of Convention 108 of the Council of Europe (the Organiser) shall hold a competition whose purpose shall be to highlight ground-breaking research on data protection.

The prize shall be awarded in memory of the leading Italian lawyer and politician, Stefano Rodotà, who worked throughout his life to promote fundamental rights, particularly for the development and implementation of the right to data protection in Europe, leaving an indelible mark on the framing of European policy in this field.

Article 2 – Entry requirements

The competition shall reward original and ground-breaking academic research, studies and articles on data protection, helping to improve current understanding of a new or emerging question, to stimulate debate in the expert community or possibly to devise new policies.

The competition shall be for projects currently running or recently finished, involving students and researchers working in foundations, civil society organisations or any other body or institution involved in data protection research, coming from member or observer Parties of the Committee of Convention 108.

Applications shall be submitted in English or French. Nevertheless, the project can be carried out in another language.

Article 3 – Eligibility criteria

The organiser reserves the right to declare null and void any application that is improper, incomplete, illegible or contains false personal details.

Any text or image that is reproduced, even imperfectly, without the appropriate reference to the original, shall be viewed as a plagiarism. Plagiarism is strictly prohibited and shall result in exclusion from the competition if detected.

Article 4 – Procedure for taking part in the competition

Registration shall be open until midnight on 18 December 2018. Applications received after this date shall not be considered.

Projects shall be submitted by means of the application form, in English or French, to the following address: dataprotection@coe.int

Applications must contain:

- the application form, duly filled in and signed;
- a summary of the work of no more than three pages;
- if necessary, appended documents.

Article 5 – Nature of the prize and conduct of the competition

The project selected by the judging panel shall be awarded the Stefano Rodotà Prize. The judging panel reserves the right to award up to three special mentions if it considers that other projects deserve to be put forward.

The prize-winning project(s) shall be granted official recognition by the members of Committee of Convention 108 and benefit from a higher profile.

The participants shall be informed that their form has been duly received as soon as possible.

The prize-winner(s) shall be notified of the judging panel's decision in January.

The prize-winning project(s) shall be unveiled officially on Data Protection Day, 28 January 2019. The winner, namely the person receiving the Stefano Rodotà Prize, shall present his/her work at the Plenary session of the Committee of Convention 108 to be held from 12 to 14 June 2019. Travel and accommodation costs shall be covered by the Organiser (according to the applicable rules).

The winner shall be informed that he/she may be photographed, interviewed or filmed during this event.

The Organiser reserves the right to modify or cancel this contest, and may not be held liable in such circumstances.

Article 6 - The judging panel

The judging panel shall be made up of the Chair of the Committee of Convention 108 and the members of its Bureau, except for members in a potential situation of conflict of interest, who shall stand down forthwith.

The organisation of the work and the deliberations of the judging panel shall be determined entirely independently by its members.

The judging panel may seek the assistance of an expert if it considers that it does not possess the necessary skills to understand and assess a particular research project. Such experts shall perform their duties confidentially; they shall not be entitled to provide assistance if they have any interest of any nature that is liable to affect their judgment.

Article 7 – Criteria for selecting prize-winner(s)

The Secretariat of the judging panel shall examine the eligibility criteria.

Selected projects shall be forwarded to the judging panel for assessment.

The judging panel may base its assessment on the following criteria:

- relevance of the subject;
- originality and ground-breaking nature of the subject;
- Contribution to improving the current understanding in the field;
- potential community impact;
- research methods;
- scientific relevance.

Article 8 – Choice of the prize-winner(s) by the judging panel

The panel members shall draw up a shortlist of 10 candidates.

The members shall select up to four prize-winners by each drawing up an individual order of preference among the 10 shortlisted candidates, which shall then be submitted to a secret ballot based on a points system.

The method shall consist in giving 4 points to the paper the member considers to be the best, 3 points to the second, 2 points to the third and 1 to the fourth.

If a candidate withdraws, the judging panel may conduct another selection process based on the shortlisted candidatures that have not been chosen.

After the ballots have been counted, the projects shall be ranked by order of points. In the event of equal points, a simple majority vote shall be held to separate the projects. Where necessary, the Chair shall have the deciding vote.

The candidate with the most points shall be awarded the Stefano Rodotà Prize. The judging panel reserves the right to award up to three projects with a special mention.

Article 9 – Data protection

The personal data of the candidates are collected by Organisers for the purpose of processing their participation in the competition. Candidates shall have a right of access, rectification and deletion for all data concerning them. These rights can be exercised by submitting a request electronically to datacommissioner@coe.int

Data shall be kept for one year.

Prize-winners accept that their names, first names and photos will be used and disseminated by the Organiser when publicising and promoting the Stéfano Rodotà Prize. Any other personal data included on the form shall not be disclosed to the public.

Article 10 – Intellectual property and guarantees

The candidates must be the authors of all the content that they defend in the context of the contest. They declare holding all the rights allowing them to fully enter undertakings under this contest.

The authors of the prize-winning projects shall authorise the Organiser to disseminate the title of the project and the summary provided by the candidate via any medium, particularly the Organiser's website or social media.
